The last time the Bean Eaters finished below the .500 mark was in 1886, when they landed fifth in the race, with fifty-six games won and sixty-one lost. They are now below the mark, with but a few games to play, and the chances are that the team picked by many good judges last spring as a sure pennant winner will come under the wire with more games lost than won. The Bostons have the record of having won more championship games in a single season than any other team. In 1892 they won 102 games and in 1898 repeated the performance, the next best record being that of Brooklyn, which won 101 games last season.

The recent breaking of the mile trotting record at Terre Haute by The Abbot has set the horse-owners to thinking, and now it is proposed to bring the record below the two-minute mark with artificial pacing. It may be humiliating to the horse, but it is intended to accomplish the feat with the use of an automobile with a wind-shield attachment to set the pace. This could be very easily accomplished, as there are several machines that can make the mile under this mark. It is claimed that a horse would not follow pace of this kind, but with a little training equine experts think the animal would become accustomed to the situation and follow with the same case that a bicycle rider does today. Horsemen will argue that such records are artificial and that the wonderful times made by cycle riders are of but little vaine, yet the fact remains that a record mile made by a horse with motor pace would attract attention all over the world, and perhaps give a line on how fast the horse really is when all things possible are in his favor.

Young Hodgert attempted to lower this last week and failed, yet Elkes rode forty miles and every one of them was two seconds faster than the Utah record. This new record is phenomenal from the fact it was made with ordinary pace and without wind shields. Elkes was further impeded toward the end of the hour by a heavy fog, which so dampened the track as to make riding exceedingly dangerous. The old record was 38 miles 464 yards and was made by Chase at the Paris exposition about a month ago. It was made with the use of wind-shields on the pacing machines, quite an item in Chase's favor. Dana Smith, coach of this year's Y. M. C. A. team, filled the position of captain last season. He learned football at the University of the South, which eleven he captained in '98 and it was through his untiring efforts that they captured the championship of the southern states.

ward in the development of her team this year. The material at hand appears to be all right, both as to quality and quantity, but the men appear very slow in rounding into form, and so far as teamwork goes the Tigers are apparently a full month behind in their work. Unless the eleven make rapid progress from now on they will have hard work to get in form by the time they are due to meet Yale, and in the meantime may be humiliated by defeat by either Lafayette or Cornell, especially the former, which she meets next Saturday. Lafayette boasts of having an exceptionally strong team this year, and, being farther advanced in her practice work than any of the other big colleges, makes no secret of the fact that she expects to lower Princeton's colors this year.

Leading candidates have come to the front for every position on the Yale football eleven during the past week until it looks to close followers of the team that the following men will line up against Harvard and Princeton: Left end, Gould; left tackle, Bloomer; left guard, Captain Brown; center, Olcott; right guard, Sheldon; right tackle, Stillman; right end, Coy; quarterback, Fincke; left half-back, Sharpe; right half-back, Cook; fullback, Hale. These candidates now have the call for first choice, but the situation may change before the big games come off and some of the above-named be forced out by new men. Captain Brown summoned Armstrong and Chamberlain, two veteran tackles, to take charge of Bloomer, and the improvement in his play since he has been matched against these veterans has been remarkable.

Nearly every prominent person connected with the fighting business has had his say about the recent fight between Corbett and McCoy, except old John L., who now comes out with his little piece and says it pretty strong, "I want to say that in my opinion the fight between Corbett and McCoy was as barefaced a robbery as was ever perpetrated. BOTH SIDES HAVE GREAT ROOM FOR IMPROVEMENT.

With the sweet incense of alfalfa and trees lingering in matted bunches known in bygone years as hair, the young giants from the north known as the Davis County Nursery football team, cut in upon Zion's guileless Christians yesterday afternoon, ostensibly for one purpose—to trample the heavy bearers of the white and blue and John Axton in the mire of defeat. The boys, when they came, wot not of the reception in store for them. They trowed 'twas outrageous as each stepped back into the county band wagon, the hero of a thousand Fourth Rigby of Centerville, breaks through of July parades, and started back, back, back towards the farm. And the score

Such was the opinion at least of many experts on the ground. The Y. M. C. A. has a much stronger team; rather, the substance of one much stronger than last year's. Bert Margetts will be good if be learns to kick the ball squarely. His interference is splendid. But Deming, with his three inches over six feet, and the best two-thirds of a couple of hundred pounds, is really the boy who can hit the line, and hit it hard. Myer, the husky Californian out of Stanford's line, showed to good advantage. Harry Jennings was inviacible at center, and all the others were more or less in good standing after the contest.

On the other side our old friend Bert Reading, who but recently took to the trees, and young Billy Rigby deserves special mention; Bert for his well defined and admirably executed propensity to jump clear over the line, and Rigby for his nerve when he goes against a dozen men, each one heavier than himself, and squirms between the recesses of their lower limbs. How It Was Played.

The visitors chose to defend the west goal and had the kick-off. Reading's big hoof performed this important factor and the first crack out of the box he landed the oval away and behind the enemy's goal line. Seare picked it up and instead of sitting on the ball, making the play a facebook he start. making the play a touchback, he started to run, which gained the Christians naught, compelling them to line up on the ten-yard line instead of the twenty-five-yard line.

ing seemed to think a whole lot of Captain Margetts' wind and urged him quite strenuously to come to a stop. It was as pretty and clean a tackle as the season has produced.

On the next play Seare started with the ball, but dropped it. Nels came to the rescue and ran the entire distance of sixty yards for a touchdown. Brother Bert made a pass at kicking goal, but the pigskin went wild. The score now was 5 to 0 and but six minutes' play had been exhausted.

Reading again kicked behind the goal line, and on the touch back Bert Margetts was allowed to kick. The elevens lined up after Bert had failed sery's other half, A. Rigby, the two being brothers, also earned more honor than be got. He is one of the hardest back, but the farmer boys carried him back, but the farmer boys carried him up in the air and quite seriously retarded his progress for two downs, when Seare ran around right end for forty-five yards, ably assisted by the interference of the Margetts boys. Nels advanced it another ten yards, and by effective pushes and shoves the Christians got the oval as far as the visitors' forty-yard line, when the first half closed.

Arthur Thomas, jr., was played at left tackle in the second half, and Hor-lick held down right guard, the idea of lick held down right guard, the idea of Coach Smith being to give everybody a share in the honors. It was a repetition of the first half, Reading and Rigby going at the Christians like steam drills, but making few effective gains. Dana Smith became enthused at a play made by Nels Margetts once, and was caught coaching on the field, for which his side lost ten yards, the usual penalty.

and was caught coaching on the field, for which his side lost ten yards, the usual penalty.

The play had proceeded for about five minutes when the Christians had the ball within one foot of their opponents' goal. Seare, in trying to make the foot, fumbled the pigskin and Reading fell on it. The farmers forced it back twenty-five yards, but finally lost on downs, and it was then that Bert Margetts ran around right end for the second touchdown. Bert made a good fifty yards when the ball was put in play again, and the Christians then devoted themselves to plain bucking. Going as far as the five-yard line, they lost the ball on those fatal downs, and while it was yet in the hands of the nurseries the time expired.

The Columbia team came up to their expectation, but the Harvard eleven showed a weakness which the coaches had not realized. Their defense is much weaker than at this time last year. Twice in the game the Columbia team seemed able to gain at will through Lawrence, the veteran tackle, while the Harvard backs gained only through occasional weak playing of the Columbia line men. In punting, too, Ellis was inferior to Morley.

Of its acceptance by the club there is no doubt.
